

Get to know your prevention specialist

Marissa Cooney, MSSA, LSW

Meet Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's Marissa Cooney who is a prevention specialist. Marissa provides Alcohol and other Drug Curriculum and Stark County Youth Led Prevention programming and facilitation at various schools in the community.

Marissa who is graduate of Perry High School, went on to earn her bachelor's degree in social work at Malone University, minoring in psychology and her master's degree in social science and administration at Case Western Reserve University.

Marissa said the best part of her job is, "I love working with youth in a group environment." This programming allows students to share their experiences in a safe, comfortable space and with the mental health support that builds self-esteem and confidence in themselves and their ability to change the world around them for the better.

Hobbies: crafting, baking, Goodwill shopping, spending time with family and friends

Favorite book: The Book Thief

Favorite movies: 10 Things I Hate About You.

C&A's Prevention program offers a variety of services to the community, schools, preschools, daycares and families to help build resiliency skills to prevent the onset of substance use and mental health disorders. Prevention focuses on helping people develop the knowledge, attitudes, and skills they need to make good choices or change harmful behaviors. Substance use and mental disorders can make daily activities difficult and impair a person's ability to work, interact with family and fulfill other major life functions. Mental illness and substance use disorders are among the leading conditions that cause disability in the United States. In addition, drug and alcohol use can lead to other chronic diseases such as diabetes and heart disease. Preventing substance use disorders and related problems is critical to Americans' mental and physical health.
