

Get to know your school-based therapist

Robert Willoughby, MA

Meet Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's Robert Willoughby, who is the school-based therapist at Tuslaw middle and high schools.

Robert, who graduated from Walsh Jesuit High School, went on to earn his bachelor's degree in general psychology from Ashford University in Michigan and his master's degree in clinical psychology from the Michigan School of Professional Psychology.

Robert said the best part of the job is, "As one might expect I love to help others. But it is much more than that; I get to learn about others, their cultures, their ideas and ways and I also get to help them learn about themselves, who they are, what their wants and desires and goals are. I get to connect with people and even help them connect with themselves."

Hobbies: cooking, hiking, zoos, gaming, traveling, coloring, art and spending time with family

Favorite book: Tim Enough For Love by Robert A. Heinlein

Favorite movies: Star Wars a New Hope; The Hobbit and Lord of the Rings Trilogy

Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's (C&A's) school-based consultation services include behavioral health screening and referral, crisis intervention, student social/emotional skill development and behavioral health and wellness education, community linkage and referrals, parent/guardian engagement/education, CARE team meetings and collaboration with school staff. When indicated, students may receive formal diagnostic and treatment services, provided at the school, by the school-based therapist.

- Students are referred to counseling by school staff and CARE teams to screen for mental health or substance issues
 - Parents are asked to be engaged in the process
 - C&A will assist with linking families to community resources as needed.
 - C&A's clinical staff collaborates closely with school staff to enhance a supportive social/emotional school environment
