Carrie Jones, BA

Meet Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's Carrie Jones, who is a prevention specialist.

Carrie, who was home schooled, went on to earn her bachelor's degree in criminology and justice studies from Kent State University. She is currently working on her master's degree in social work through Ohio University.

Carrie said, the best part of her job is, "getting to build relationships with teachers and directors, helping them to recognize their full potential. I also love compiling and sharing resources to help teachers better manage their classrooms and increase social emotional learning."

Carrie is a prevention specialist in Early Childhood Centers throughout Stark County.

C&A's Prevention program offers a variety of services to the community, schools, preschools, daycares and families to help build resiliency skills to prevent the onset of substance use and mental health disorders. Prevention focuses on helping people develop the knowledge, attitudes, and skills they need to make good choices or change harmful behaviors. Substance use and mental disorders can make daily activities difficult and impair a person's ability to work, interact with family and fulfill other major life functions. Mental illness and substance use disorders are among the leading conditions that cause disability in the United States. In addition, drug and alcohol use can lead to other chronic diseases such as diabetes and heart disease. Preventing substance use disorders and related problems is critical to Americans' mental and physical health.
