

Get to know your school-based therapist

Melissa Miranda, MS

Meet Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's Melissa Miranda who is the school-based therapist at GlenOak High School.

Melissa, who graduated from Trinity Catholic High School (Fla.), went on to earn her bachelor's degree in cognitive and behavioral neuroscience and minored in disabilities in society from the University of Florida and her master's degree in clinical psychology from Nova Southeastern University. She is working on her doctorate degree in clinical psychology.

Melissa said, the best part of her job is, "I love learning from all children, adolescents and families I work with. It also means a lot to me when I can connect with families. Lastly, I have met amazing colleagues along the way. There are many people who are supportive of my goals and assist me in growing to be a better psychologist in training."

Hobbies: watching and playing basketball, trying new coffee shops and reading.

Favorite book: The Giving Tree

Favorite movies: Monsters University and Freaky Friday

Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's (C&A's) school-based consultation services include behavioral health screening and referral, crisis intervention, student social/emotional skill development and behavioral health and wellness education, community linkage and referrals, parent/guardian engagement/education, CARE team meetings and collaboration with school staff. When indicated, students may receive formal diagnostic and treatment services, provided at the school, by the school-based therapist.

- Students are referred to counseling by school staff and CARE teams to screen for mental health or substance issues
 - Parents are asked to be engaged in the process
 - C&A will assist with linking families to community resources as needed.
 - C&A's clinical staff collaborates closely with school staff to enhance a supportive social/emotional school environment
